DECEIT

Reason deceives us; conscience, never.
—Jean Jacques Rousseau

BEING MOM AND DAD: This year, our parish offered something a little different for Mother's Day and Father's Day. We pray that these gifts may help you all to grow in prayer as individuals and as a family.

Last weekend, some wonderful things happened. That Father's Day, we gave out rosary key rings to all of the dads and father figures in our parish. In addition to the fathers who took their gift, children also chose rosaries for their dads. Other people took them home to fathers, grandfathers, and other male father figures whom they would see and celebrate with later that day.

Some took these gifts and gave them to their mothers instead. For these children, their mother plays the role of both mother and father, especially in their single parent families.

Our Church takes seriously the responsibility for preserving the family, and to recognize and value the importance of the complementarity of men and women in their contributions to relationships, including marriage and family. We have the instinctual sense that men and women offer gifts to marriage and family that are respectively unique because of their gender.

At the same time, the delimitation of these roles is not so simple, because good parenting calls on mothers and fathers to use all of the gifts that they are blessed with as human beings, regardless of gender, in order to foster and grow their families in holy, healthy and happy ways. In practical terms, this means that the laundry still needs to get done, the meals need to be cooked, and the house still needs cleaning. Repairs still need to be made on broken furniture, and the gutters need to be cleaned. And the bills still need to get paid. For one parent to leave the other to handle all of the responsibilities is egotistical and selfish. To not do these chores because "it's woman's work" or "that's a man's job," when the need and urgency are clear, is also selfish. God designed the relationship of husband and wife in order that they should work as a team, collaborating together and making up for what is lacking in the other.

Furthermore, in some families, there is only the one parent, and these parents have to meet the needs of their families and grow them, regardless of societal norms regarding gender roles. A single dad, for example, still has to raise his daughter according to her needs, just as a single mom has to tend to her son according to his. These are just as much families as those with both mother and father and these parents, too, share the vocation of parenthood. Yet these parents shoulder the responsibilities of being both father and mother.

Most importantly, every parent, whether father or mother, has the duty of teaching their children how to grow in relationship with God, which they do through their loving behavior and instruction. Parents "are the first teachers of the faith," the baptismal rite says. When mothers and fathers allow themselves to be reflections of God, who is like a mother ("Can a mother forget the baby at her breast and have no compassion on the child she has borne? Though she may forget, I [God] will not forget you!" Isaiah 49:15) and a father ("Call no one on earth your father; you have but one Father in heaven," (Matthew 23:9), they proclaim the good news of God's salvation to their children.

In our parish, we have diverse expressions of family, and all of you share the same desire: to have families who love and treasure one another, and who know that you are loved by God and challenged to live lives in accordance with that love, by belonging to the greater family of the Church. We, you parish family, thank you, and pray for you all, that you may continue to grow as families, and as members of God's family.

JOHN THE BAPTIST

Since June 24 falls on a Sunday this year, the Church has the opportunity for a more intense celebration of the birth of John the Baptist, who is often described as the last of the Old Testament prophets and the bridge between Judaism and Christianity. More commonly, John is known as the "precursor" of our Lord Jesus Christ. All the Gospels report John's basic message: Repent, the kingdom is near at hand. One greater than I is coming.

Though he was a wandering preacher who dressed in camel skins and ate grasshoppers, John's legacy is one of true royalty. His origins are similar to those foretold by God through the prophet Isaiah: "You are my servant, he said to me, Israel through whom I show my glory" (Isaiah 49:3). John's humility—"I am not he"—was surpassed only by that of his Lord Jesus, the humble servant who followed.
