Karen's Corner

Did you know that Sir Isaac Newton, one of the greatest scientists in history, saw his discoveries as revealing God's intelligent design when he said, "This most beautiful system of the sun, planets, and comets, could only proceed from the counsel and dominion of an intelligent and powerful Being."? Albert Einstein, the greatest scientist of modern times, wrote that a conflict between religion and science "appears impossible" when he said "science can only be created by those who are thoroughly imbued with the aspiration toward truth and understanding. This source of feeling, however, spring from the sphere of religion. To this there also belongs the faith in the possibility that the regulations valid for the world of existence are rational, that is comprehensible to reason. I cannot conceive of a genuine scientist without that profound faith. The situation may be expressed by an image: science without religion is lame, religion without science is blind." And Antony Flew, a well-known philosopher of this century and for many, many years, the most famous atheist in the world, recently changed his mind. Obeying the Socratic command to "follow the argument wherever it leads," Flew examined the significance of recent scientific discoveries, including the lawfulness of nature, the origin of life, and the Big Bang; and concluded that a creator God must exist. People who claim that the Catholic Faith rejects science are incorrect. The Catechism says, "Methodical research in all branches of knowledge, provided it is carried out in a truly scientific manner and does not override moral laws, can never conflict with the faith, because the things of the world and the things of faith derive from the same God." Yes, there have been conflicts in the past between science and religion, but the Church holds the principle that there is no intrinsic conflict between science and religion. It would be difficult to go through every argument of those who don't believe in God in this column. But studying the words of Pope John Paul II, as well as the documents of Vatican II, and my own reading, research and prayer leads me to believe in God. I have had personal encounters with God that have changed my life and in living my life as a daughter of God, I hope people see that God lives within me. I am human, I make mistakes, but I hope that a good life of kindness, compassion and prayer help me to overcome my humanness in order for me to become more like Our Lord. One of the best books I have ever read is called, "The Case for Christ" by Lee Strobel. Lee's wife became a Christian and as an atheist and a journalist, he sought out the best minds in the world to refute his wife's beliefs. By the end of his research he converted to Christianity. Every word he wrote just lifted me up and strengthened my faith. He has written several books which have helped me to deepen my faith. His story is amazing.

See you soon! Karen

STEWARDSHIP – In today's gospel we go back in time to listen to Jesus as he gives instructions at the Last Supper. His words speak to all of us as he is preparing us to be sent out into the world to proclaim his Good News. The gift of the Holy Spirit is poured out upon the entire community of faith to do this work, not just a few. No one is to be excluded. Are there those we choose to exclude because we don't like them? In the name of our Lord, Jesus Christ, what do we intend to do about it?
